Abstract:	Ephraim Amu (1899–1995) was a seminal Ghanaian composer, musicologist, and educator widely regarded as the father of Ghanaian choral music. Born in Peki Avetile, he was educated at the Basel Mission Seminary and later the Royal College of Music, London. Amu's career spanned influential teaching posts at the Presbyterian Training College, Akropong, and Achimota College, where he pioneered the use of African musical idioms and instruments. He is best known for composing "Yen Ara Asaase Ni," Ghana's unofficial national anthem, and for his instrumental role in establishing the Music Department at the University of Ghana's Institute of African Studies. A recipient of the Order of the Volta and an honorary doctorate from the University of Ghana, Amu's work bridged traditional African rhythms with Western notation, profoundly shaping Ghanaian national identity and music education.

Biographical/Historical note

Ephraim Amu was born on 13th September 1899 at Peki Avetile in the Volta Region of the Gold Coast now Ghana. His parents were Stephen Amu Yao better known as Papa Stefano, and Sarah Akoram Amma.

He was a prolific writer of African music. He wrote and composed the famous patriotic song "Yen Ara Asaase Ni" (This is our own native land) and other notable songs like Abibirima (sons of Africa), Asem Yi Di Ka (This word has to be said) and Adikanfo, Mo! (Pioneers, Congratulations!).

Amu received the Grand medal award from the National Liberation Council and the award of the Member of the Order of Volta in January 1973 by the National Redemption Council and various awards and commendations for his immense contribution to development of Ghanaian music.

He completed his middle school education in 1915 at Peki Blengo. Ephraim Amu attended the Basel Mission Seminary at Abetifi Kwahu in January 1916 to train for four years as a teacher and catechist. After his training, Amu taught at a middle school in Peki Blengo in 1920. In 1926 he was posted to the Presbyterian Training College, Akropong, as tutor of music, scripture and agriculture – three subjects which he loved passionately.

From the period of 1934 to 1951, Amu taught at the Achimota College. He was sent overseas to study music at the Royal College of Music, London, in 1937, and obtained the Associate Diploma in Theory of Music in 1940. He became the head of Specialist Music Department in 1949 at Achimota Training College. Amu got married in 1942 to Beatrice Amu.

Some students and tutors of Achimota Training College were moved to form the nucleus of the Kumasi College of Technology in 1951; Amu went along with it to Kumasi. In Kumasi he composed songs for the Ramseyer Presbyterian Church choir and also worked at the cultural centre together with Alex Kyeremateng and Bertie Opoku. While at Kumasi College of Technology, Amu conducted research into various aspects of Ghanaian music in various parts of Ghana.

He went on pension in 1961. In that same year, he was invited by Dr. Kwame Nkrumah to submit a memorandum on music education in Ghana. It was on the basis of this memorandum that led to the establishment of the music department of the institute of African Studies of the University of Ghana, Legon. Amu's service was once more engaged as Senior Research Fellow of the Institute of African Studies. Amu retired from the service of University of Ghana in October 1971 and the University awarded him an honorary doctorate degree in music.

Ephraim Amu died on Monday 2nd January 1995.

Scope and Contents

This collection consists of the personal papers of Ephraim Amu. It includes his seminary notes on courses like Old and New Testament Exegesis, Isagogics, Symbolics, Ethics, Pastoral Theology and Dogmatics. He took these notes during his education at the Abetifi Basel Mission Seminary where he was trained as a teacher and catechist from 1916 to 1919. The collection also contains 15 diaries from 1930 to 1960 in which his daily activities during those periods were recorded. He also kept newspaper clippings on his musical performances, exploits and efforts in promoting African music. The bulk of his correspondence in this collection transpired during his public service career at Akropong Training College, Achimota College, Kumasi College of Technology and University of Ghana. There was a significant amount of correspondence between him and the people from his hometown (Peki-Avetile). There was also correspondence between him and notable people like K. A. Gbedemah, Ofori Kuma II, Nii Amaa Ollenu, G. A. S. Northcote, Daniel Chapman and J. P. Andrews. The papers include sermons and addresses that were delivered during morning devotions, Sunday morning and evening church meetings and other gatherings. It also contains speeches, lectures and unpublished articles. Other items of interests in the collection include photographs, financial records, invitation cards and articles and lectures specifically on music. As an educationist, he maintained a collection of the Teacher's Journal that was periodically published by the Director of education in the Gold Coast colony.
